ROK Armies Face Critical Food Shortage

Chief Of Staff May Ask UN For Help

SEOUL, Friday, Feb. 27 P-The food crisis in the Army of the Republic of Korea has grown so grave that its chief of staff said Thursday he would ask the United Nations for help.

The chief of staff, Gen. Paik Sun Yup, made his decision known in a telephone interview. He did not go into detail, but said he was preparing to ask the U. N. for aid in solving the food problem.

It is a paradox that the South Korean Army is gaining strength in numbers and losing strength at the chow line.

Many In Hospitals

The situation was pointed up yesterday by Defense Minister Shin Tae Yong, who said in a statement at Pusan that in the "miserable food situation" the South Korean soldier gets only a third of the cal-

Effective Monday, March 2, the price of The Cumberland News will be increased from 5 cents to 6 cents per copy and from 30c to 36c per week delivered to your home.

This is the first increase in price to readers since 1946, and the new price is necessitated by tremendous increases in production costs since that time. The price of newsprint alone has almost doubled (since 1946) to an all time high of $127 per ton. All other newspaper production cost elements-wages, news and feature services, metal, materials, ink, freight, transportation, etc.-have also increased progressively.

We regret the necessity of this change, but in announcing the new price The Cumberland News joins the ranks of the many publications of all sizes all over the country which have had to ask their readers to pay an extra penny a day in order partially to meet these tremendous increases in costs.

At President Eisenhower's suggestion, the conferees agreed to set ip a special commission to study ways of eliminating duplicate survces and taxes.

The commission will be composed of members appointed by Eisenhower, who presided at today's session, the Conference of State Governors, and Congress. A White House statement described present state-federal relationships as a "hodgepodge" of duplication and waste. "The existing systems of taxation, both at the federal and state

Treaties Vs. Domestic Laws

Secretary of State Dulles and Attorney General Brownell have been invited to appear before a Senate Judiciary subcommittee on a constitutional amendment sponsored by Senator Bricker (R., Ohio) and no Jess than 63 other senators. Bricker says that Dulles and Brownell want to "work out something" along the lines of his proposal.

The proposed amendment would deny to a treaty, even though ratified by the Senate, the effect of domestic law unless and until Congress passed legislation to carry out the treaty. No treaty provision would be "of any force or effect" if it contravened any right enumerated in the Constitution.

No treaty could authorize an international organization to supervise any constitutional rights of U. S. citizens within the U. S. or "any other matter essentially within the domestic jurisdiction of the U. S." And the same limitations would apply to any agreement made by the President with a foreign power or official, or with an international organiza-

Those advocating the proposed amendment, or something like it, point out that although the Constitution makes treaties "the supreme law of the land," It gives the same status to itself and to laws enacted under it. Then what if a treaty is in conflict with the Constitution or with a law?

Senator Bricker has reminded the Judiciary subcommittee that the Supreme Court has never ruled a treaty provision unconstitutional. But opponents of the amendment have argued that it would hamstring a President and his secretary of State in foreign negotiations and that, anyhow, the Senate wouldn't have ratified any treaty actually in conflict with the Con-

Russia's New Plans

Is Russia preparing to get tough? Moscow seems to be sighting for new targets in Europe and the Middle East while China, guarding her rear, maintains the status quo in Korea.

In Europe the target is Germany. The East German Communists have issued a proclamation, frankly avowing their intention of overthrowing (they used the word) the Allied government of West Berlin and of making Berlin the capital of a united Germany-under their own domination, naturally.

In the Middle East Russia's immediate target is less specific, though her over-all aims are clear, Moscow is making all out efforts to enlist the Arab world on her side. Britain, traditionally the supplier of arms to the Arabs, may find herself shoved aside by Russia.

It is orthodox Communist doctrine that every war must be turned into a civil war. Another war would undermine the weak Arab governments until native Communists, armed and directed by Russia, could take over. Here, as in Germany, it might not be necessary for Russia to appear openly.

Moscow might remain in the background pulling strings-and talking blandly of her desire

These are Russia's plans-or, at least, she appears to want the U.S. to think so. What can Washington do? Its plans, if any, for ending the war in Korea seem to have bogged down. Perhaps Washington could try to preserve the unstable peace in the Middle East by meeting Arab demands and outbidding Russia. It could try anew to straighten defenses in West Germany.

But Russia figures that such sterner measures would also play into her hands by making this country's allies more panicky.

No Trespassing

Before last January, Japanese defense officials and the American Air Defense Command in Japan had compiled a long list of infractions by Soviet planes of the northern borders of Hokkaido. Many of these were visual sightings, and about as many were made on

In October, the United States lost a B-29 while on unarmed weather patrol inside the Japanese borders. Russian planes from the Kuriles came over the border to get at it.

On January 17 Japan sent Russla a tough note demanding that these aerial border violations cease and warning of a new shoot-on-sight policy. This no trespassing sign was backed by the U.S. Air Defense Command.

Things were quiet for about a month, but last Monday the radar scopes reported two hostiles inside Japanese territory. Intercepting Thunderjets flew alongside, discovered they were Russian-made fighters, and signaled them to land. The answer was a "head on firing pass," which is an all out invitation to fight.

Both American jets accepted the challenge and after a brief dogfight, broken off as the border was reached, one of the invaders started giving out smoke and losing altitude.

The incident is just part of the harassing tactics of a broad cold war policy on Russia's part. Such probing actions are standard procedure wherever Russian or Russian satellite borders coincide with those of the West. The attitude of American fliers in this instance is the sort of thing the Russian seems to understand

Divots And Devotees

It is not exaggeration to say that a mole has nothing on a golfer when it comes to destroying the home lawn. It works like this: The playing space is usually rather confining, so a man is naturally limited to a short range club, say a 6 or 7 iron. And because the golfer imagines he is laying 'em dead to the pin, he takes the necessary divot to give the ball plenty of spin and keep it out of the barberry hedge. Most golfers would rather tangle with an enraged tom cat than fish a ball from the depths of a barberry.

Anyway, a golfer can take just so many divots in one place, as he soon scalps the place clean. It's no fun to chip from bare ground unless one is out on the course and under the eagle eye of his opponent. But no doubt there is plenty of room on the south lawn of the White House for this sort of thing.

It seems that President Eisenhower, an ardent golfer, has been taking out a few irons and a bag of practice balls when he can. Alert members of the White House press corps report he's had at least two sessions at working over his short game.

There is little doubt the President is good enough so there is no reason to worry about his beaning someone out on Pennsylvania Avenue or on Sixteenth Street. And the matter of the divots is not too important. Good turf was meant to be used, and there are plenty of civil service gardners and landscapers around to replace the turf, lopped off tulip heads and any other damage Mr. Eisenhower might cause.

After Retirement

The University of Chicago recentbegan a study of a group of elderly persons who are living in retirement in Florida. The purpose is to try to find the answers to many of the problems associated with this phrase of life. We are all for it and hope that other universities will take on similar projects. The subject of retirement has been neglected and needs to be studied scientifically to determine the facts. We ought to learn whether retirement should be fostered, modified or condemned.

The medical profession is interested because health plays a major role in promoting happiness and contentment. Vice versa also is true. Furthermore, the health aspect must be given strong consideration because infirmities are common during this time of life. A point against a poorly planned retirement is that the organs and tissues of the body atrophy and sometimes die unless they serve a useful purpose and the same can be said of the busy individual who proceeds to live the life of a cabbage. An aimless existence is not what nature intended and those who are bewildered after working hard for many years had better find themselves quickly or be lost.

The human machine loses much of its flexibility after the age of 60. It is difficult for an energetic man who has kept pace with a competitive world to turn the steam off abruptly. Unless he has acquired hobbies and congenial friends he is keenly aware of the lack of incentive, imagination, and driving power. Such persons become first rate neurotics and lead a miserable existence.

Dr. Edward L. Bortz, past president of the American Medical Association, noted that pension systems originally were devised for executive personnel to encourage retirement at the age of 65. The purpose was to make room at the top for younger men so that new ideas could be introduced into industry. In this respect, the motive behind retirement was to give junfor executives a break and, to a lesser extent, to reward the older

Some are old at 65 and others are young. This situation has set up new prob-Iems because it fails to give the break to the efficient man or woman who desires to keep on working. On the other hand, if we are to re turn to the original purpose of retirement, we will have to make it more attractive.

This phase is in operation in some companies. They are attempting to prepare an employe who is approaching this period with the latest information and advice on postretirement activities. In this way they hope to avoid the innumerable social and economic pitfalls that are likely to tranish the golden years of life. Scientific research also will uncover more specific information. Meanwhile the medical profession is doing its part by trying to prevent degenerative diseases which lead to many of the hardships and sufferings of the

India's Dilemma

More and more. India supports the position of Soviet Russia against the United States. And more and more, it is being clarified that India's major fear is that an extension of the Korean War would involve India as a battlefield. The Indians have no means of defending their country against the forces of the United States, Soviet Russia or Soviet China and therefore strive to limit the war to Korea where the costs are borne principally by the United States.

In his recent address to Parliament, president of India, Dr. Rajendra Prasad, said:

"Certain statements recently made and the consequences that might flow from them in extending the war in Korea, have caused considerable apprehension in the minds of people all over the world. My government has viewed these developments with grave concern. I trust that any tendency towards an extension of the war, which has already brought disaster in its train, will be checked, and the minds of nations and peoples will be turned towards a peaceful approach to these problems . . . "

What working for peace means is not clear. Thus far, any proposals made by India have been to the advantage of Soviet Russia, Dr. Prasad made the point that India pursues a policy of friendship with all countries "without any alignment with one group of nations against another." If friendship is established by working to give a victory to our enemies, then India has shown us friendship! Otherwise, it must be regarded that India is accepting the Russian position, namely, that Stalin's peace terms benefit the world.

One of the major difficulties that face the American people in arriving at conclusions concerning our international relations is that the "One World" propaganda and support of the United Nations have caused us to forget our own country and the fact that it is Americans who die on the battlefield while all the little and weak nations split hairs over what we must do. It would appear that the United States has no right to form a policy of its own.

Dr. Prasad said that the Indian government had labored to build a new and prosperous India, but "the problems of the rest of the world thrust themselves upon us and we cannot avoid them or isolate ourselves from them The United States is in much the same position as India; the problems of the whole world have been thrust upon us and we cannot isolate ourselves from them. The only difference is that the United States is called upon to pay the bills not only in money but in lives.

Whenever an effort is made to re-establish our position on a rational and equitable basis, a great outery goes up in Europe and Asia. Even when it is suggested that the American taxpayer has contributed enough to support the selfish policies of other countries, we are, in effect, regarded as robbers because we wish to hold on to our own money.

"The Times of India" comments on this:

'President Eisenhower brings a military mind to bear on the probsoldiers, he delights in hunting for peace with a gun . .

As false as that statement is, it is accepted in many countries which want our financial aid but reject our right to fight for our survival. We have been bogged down for almost 20 months in truce talks, while fighting in Korea continues and American casualties

Yet, so influential a newspaper as "The Times of India" can say to its readers that Eisenhower, in effect, enjoys the hunt. Eisenhower inherited a meaningless. purposeless war which he must end with honor and dignity.

It would be a sad day for India if the United States withdrew from Korea, freeing the Chinese Communists to march on French Indo-China, Burma and Nepal. It would be a sadder day for India if Russia felt free to move into Pakistan, to seize Kashmir, and to lie on the borders of India, waiting for a combined Chinese-Russian action against that coun-

Then the Indians would pipe another tune, calling for our help, as so many other nations call for our help in their moments of desperation. The help then might not be available, for, as neutralism grows in these countries, more of our people are turning colder to pouring aid into lands where what we do is not appreciated.

Exactly what happened inside the White House when a group of congressional leaders were briefed on the international situation has had the world guessing ever since. Just why did senators emerge from the White House to pronounce the state of the world "grim.

Briefly here are the nonsecurity highlights of what the congressional leaders were told

1. The Chief Friction Point Is Berlin. Intelligence Chief Allen Dulles, brother of the secretary of State, warned that the Communist party might try to squeeze us out of Berlin this spring. Dulles could not predict whether they would try to choke us off with another blockade or send East Germans into the West sector to stage serious riots. However, he warned that trouble was coming. Meanwhile, the Air Force has a master plan ready for another Berlin airlift to be used at the drop of the Red flag. 2. Drive In French Indo-China. The congressmen were told that the Kremlin was likely to hit the West in several places at the same time, and one of these, acording to Allen Dulles, is French Indo-China, Russian and Chinese leaders, he said, had been conferring on this recently

General Bradley, however, claimed the Chinese didn't have a large army on the Indo-Chinese border. lems of peace. Like many other though he said guerrillas and supplies did seem to be pouring into Indo-China. As a countermove Dulles urged that American, supplies be stepped up to aid the French. The French, he said, were asking for a five-year plan during which we would send half a billion dollars worth of supplies each year to Indo-China.

> This brought an exclamation of surprise and incredulity from Sen. Alex Wiley, chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee. Million-Man Chinese Army

3. A Communist Drive On Korea, General Bradley reported, was not to be discounted. The Chinese are using a new rotation plan and have put two new divisions in the front lines. Unfortunately, lifting the embargo around Formosa hasn't drawn any Chinese troops out of Korea to defend the mainland opposite Formosa. The Chinese Communists force in Korea remains one million men.

On the other hand, the United Nations has 10 per cent more American troops in Korea today than on January 1. The reason, Bradley said, is because other UN units had to be rotated. Any big UN drive in Korea, the congressmen were warned, would cost us total casualties of around 50,000 men and would not be possible without sending more American divisions to the men's minds everywhere has begun in earnest. Moral force-the most powerful weapon the world has ever known because it eventually overturns rulers and oligarchies no matter how strong their dictatorship-has been unleashed by America in the United Nations with an uninhibited fury. For the first time since the Korean War broke out, the United States Government has formally and openly and unequivocally accused Soviet Russia not only of having instigated the Far Eastern conflict, which now has caused hundreds of thousands of casualties, but of supplying arms and ammunition to the North Korean and Communist Chinese armies to keep the war going.

There have been hints of this before in speeches by American representatives of the Truman administration at the UN, but the comprehensive charges and forthright declarations by former Senator Henry Cabot Lodge, now the U. S. ambassador to the United Nations, climaxes a long pent-up feeling that must inevitably shape the thinking of the free world along new lines of action.

USSR Betrayed Its Membership

For the debate is more significant than mere speech-making and rebuttals. It is the forerunner of an inevitable series of steps that may either build the UN to the strongest international organization to enforce peace that the world has ever known or shatter it to pieces-wrecked by the treasonable action of one of its foremost members. Soviet Russia.

For the bill of particulars just given by Ambassador Lodge constitutes a charge that Soviet Russia has betrayed her membership in the UN and shown herself faithless to her obligations. She has furnished military support to an aggressor, despite the formal resolution of the UN of October 1950, calling on all member nations to refrain from aiding the aggressor countries.

No international body can survive if any of its members enters into a secret alliance to thwart the will of the majority by military means.

Looking into the future, the new turn of American policy means that the foundations are being laid for a challenge to Soviet Russia in which the free world must take the Iron curtain in a single thought sides. Here is no question of the merits of the Korean War itself or of the isues which surround it, plunging its people into war. And but a simple question of fidelity the case against the Moscow reto an international charter. Once the free world unites on the proposition that aggression will not be rewarded or condoned, the whole face of things will in due time change in Asia. Countries like India and the Arab nations, for example, cannot afford to be counted as either ignoring aggression or as looking the other way when the principle of collective security is sabotaged. They, also, may face aggressors some day and the United States is capable of looking the other way, tooif collective security breaks down.

The American ambassador's

speech is known to have been the result of high-level conferences here, and it will not fade away into a mere exchange of indignant addresses. For the United States is being asked to accept the responsibility of world leadership and not only to send its youth to do battle in Korea but to send billions of dollars of taxpayers' money to bolster up the economic structures of many free nations. It now will be interesting to see how many friends America will find at her side in the United Nations and what the attitude of other governments will be toward the natural follow-up steps which must come when Soviet Russia is put on trial for her flagrant action in breaking the peace of the world through her instigation of the Korean aggres-

The UN is today supported by American public opinion despite the many vicissitudes of its brief existence, but the UN will die the same death as the League if the free nations forfeit their opportunity to mobilize the moral force of the world behind the drive that must some day penetrate to the peoples behind the iron curtain as they learn the tragic truth. For, after the bloody years of World War II, the Moscow government is creating a situation that will drag its innocent people into war once more by such dangerous adventures as now have been disclosed in the Far East.

The term "psychological warfare" has been variously described, but its best meaning is the use of moral force to unite the minds of people on both sides of -to eliminate any group of men in any regime which insists on

Matter Of Fact

Judo In Foggy Bottoms

It is too bad that the Eisenhower administration's new Far Eastern policy has been revealed piecemeal and by seepage. The design is both bolder in conception and more astute in detail than anyone realizes except a few outsiders. And at the risk of repeating some facts disclosed in this space, the design is well worth examining as a whole, which is the only way to understand it fully. The most discussed part of the design is the scheme of "disengagement," as Secretary of State John Foster Dulles calls it. In Korea, the American infantry is to be withdrawn from the battle line, and replaced by South Ko-In Indo-China, the anti-Communist native army is to be greatly expanded-probably doubled-in order to reduce the burden on the French.

The most obvious results of "disengagement" are a prospective reduction of the American casualty rate in Korea, and the increase of Western strength in reserve. American divisions are actually to be deployed out of Korea, certainly to Japan, perhaps to the United But any re-deployment of the French forces in Indo-China will certainly be impossible for a long time to come; while in Korea, the South Koreans will continue to need support by American artillery and other special branches of the ground forces, plus full air and naval support. The military results will be less important than the political and psychological re-

Will Change Pattern Such diverse observers as former Ambassador to Moscow George Kennan and Admiral Arthur Radford have insisted for many months that the Kremlin would never end the Korean fighting, so long as it was costing the Western alliance a great deal more than it was costing the Soviet empire. Secretary Dulles is reported to have said the same thing another way, asking, "Why should it worry them, when they have their second team pinning down our first team?

The first-fruit of disengagement will be to revolutionize this hopeless pattern. The Chinese effort in Korea is very great. Even the Soviet effort is far from inconsiderable. Under the new scheme, the Chinese and the Soviets are no longer to be rewarded for their peripherally bogged down in Ko-

It is hard to think of anything that is more likely to disconcert Peking and Moscow, than finding, one fine morning, that they are fighting South Koreans instead of Americans. It is quite impossible to thing of anything, except the most risky and costly offensive ef fort, that is more likely to make Moscow and Peking reconsider their Korean program.

The planned major build-up of the Indo-Chinese anti-Communist armies will also give Peking and Moscow distasteful food for thought. The Asiatic Communist high command has no doubt been counting heavily on the additional divisions now being trained in South China for the Indo-Chinese Communist government. The new Indo-Chinese Communist forces will not only counter-balance these new Communist divisions. It is hoped they will also end the long Indo-Chinese stalemate.

Two Questions Arise

A high proportion of the new troops will be specially trained for the hard task of mopping up territory regained from the Communists guerrillas and governments are to be constricted in smaller and smaller territories, until they are effectually reduced to a bandit problem. In the end, the story of the Greek Communist guerrillas is to be repeated.

Here two ugly questions arise. Will not the Chinese armies invade Indo-China, if the native Communists are pushed to the wall, just as they invaded Korea in similar circumstances? And will not they launch an all-out offensive in Korea itself, if they find no one but South Koreans in the line?

These two questions had a major influence in paralyzing our past policy. Our own chiefs of staff have powerfully emphasized them. They are grave questions. Only the other day an escaped member of the Indo-Chinese Communist government Pham Le Bong brought a warning that the Chinese had already promised their Indo-Chinese colleagues to intervene in case of

To answer these questions is of course the real purpose of the new Formosa policy so falsely reported as "unleashing Chiang Kaishek." Chiang will continue his pinprick coastal raids. As his forces are strengthened he may ever try to take back some of the coastal islands that the Chinese Communists hold very lightly. But the real purpose of strengthening Chiang Kai-shek's forces and position is to provide a serious threat on the Chinese Communist flank. Chinese intervention in Indo-China will invited a powerful flank attack on the Chinese coast. And an all-out Chinese offensive in Korea will remove the limits on the effort by the spectacle of the flow- war there. These are the deterrents er of the American ground forces which so to speak re-insure the other parts of the new Far Eastern design. Viewed as a whole this new design admirably combines prudence ingenuity and courage. It proves the value of an effort by fresh minds to end the old "posture of paralyzed tension."
